C. E. Washburne's Strange Infatuation and the Troubles it has Led Him Into.

Just before his departure for San Francisco vesterday on the Monowai, C. E. Washburne announced to rej resentatives of the press and others that he should return and marry a daughter of John Cummins. Mr. Washburne is a newspaper man of the coast metropolis and left there for Honolulu February 3. His wife, a refined, sad-faced lady was at the wharf to bid him good-bye and wish him a safe a speedy return. The two had been married for some years and lived in a cottage of their own at Berkeley. It appears from the story which Mr. Washburne told freely and apparently wished to have known here that he had not lived happily with his wife and so fell an easy victim to the charms of Miss Cummins, He seemed to have made his choice deliberately as he had taken abundant pains to acquaint himself with the attractions of other native and half white women and reached the conclusion that she was the pick of the flock.

A gentleman believed to be Mrs. Washburne's lawyer arrived on the Mariposa to investigate. He said to a STAR reporter that, some weeks ago, Mr. Washburne had written his wife giving full details of his courtship and of his relations with various women here, to the end that she might secure a divorce and release him from his marital vows. The wife was nearly distracted and went weeping to her husband's acquaintances, who advised her to go to an attorney. She did so, and the result was a letter from the lawyer, which Mr. Washburne received about six weeks since, that if he would deed over his interest in the Berkeley homestead to his wife she would free him from his bonds.

In the meantime Washburne had written his better half asking for a loan of $50 with which to buy an engagement ring for Miss Cummins. As Mrs. Washburne had no funds and no inclination to meet the demand if she had been solvent, the newspaper man was obliged to await his regular remittances. These were liberal and Mr. Washburne had no trouble, finally, in sealing his new compact with a solitaire.

The unfortunate hero of these adventures is 26 years old, and in times past, has done capable work in his profession. and that, if he secures asylum treatment of the proper kind, he will live to atone, if possible, for his deplorable errors.

On his departure yesterday his in-

Under the proposed arrangement the general delivery will also be continuously at the public service.

By keeping the office open during port it is believed that a vast number of postage stamps will be sold to tourists for collections.

Mr. Oat's plan will involve the hiring of a new clerk, but it will offset the expense of that by the extra business done and the convenience which it will afford to the Honolulu public.

Unfortunately the poison spread by lot of renegades is working among an element that can ill afford to lose their means of subsistence, especially is this and so the guillotine has been quite busy here lately and a number of heads have rolled in the basket. Their places have been filled from among the Portu guese who, we are pleased to say, are irm annexationists to a man; in fact and reform element in past crises and though late in receiving it, should long
